Chad Jorgensen is a Senior Supervision Manager that has been employed with the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago (Des Moines office) for 17 years with nearly all of that time spent in the Community Bank Division. In his role, he has a portfolio of state member banks, large and/or complex holding companies, and a team of examiners. Responsibilities include: serving as a point-of-contact, monitoring the financial condition of his portfolio, ensuring that examination/inspection activities are consistent with the organization’s risk profile, and overseeing the performance management and career development of his team members.

He received a B.S. in finance from Iowa State University in 1998. Chad was raised on a farm in Northwest Iowa that has been in the family for well over 100 years. He enjoys taking a week or two of vacation each October to return and help with the harvest. Chad and his wife Katie have the delight of raising three boys in Grimes, Iowa.